

I Have the Key (Ghost Game)

This is a fun little game you can play as a means of contacting those who have passed on to the other side. Here's How!

Sit in a darkened room with only a single small light source (portable). Usually this is a candle, but you can also use a cell phone light if necessary. What's important is that the light can sit between two people to illuminate one another's faces (please be careful with candle flames, etc.). One person is the caller and the other is the receiver. This will make sense in a moment. NOTE: While, this exercise is for two people to share, others can watch.

While sitting in a circle of salt with your partner, decide who one wishes to contact. Only choose one person at a time, as both people are needed to contact a single person. Now, hold hands and simultaneously chant the following:

*I have the key to open the gate to see what I want to see,
And I want to see {Insert name of the dead individual you wish to contact}.*

Look into the face of the person across from you. If you are the 'caller,' your goal is to watch the shadows and light around their face begin to morph their appearance into that of the dead individual. If you are the 'receiver,' you are to be the conduit for the dead. Do NOT break the circle of salt, nor let go of one another's hands until the ritual is complete. The circle is one of protection and should be treated as such.

Take your time to experience this minor form of contact. This ritual is meant to establish a connection with those that have passed, while limiting the risks of being harassed by an ornery ghost trying to scare the shit out of you. It's the land of the dead, there is no life of the party. NOTE: Keep in mind that you are contacting those who have lost connection with the sublime experiences & sensations that bless the physical realm (You know, the reasons why we prefer life to begin with). They're going to fuck with you, make shit up, etc. It's way too tempting and a great way to pass the time that is eternity. Don't lie, you'd do it too. Just don't take it too seriously.

When you're ready to end the session, here is the following goodbye to do so. Please remember to thank the spirits for their time and cooperation. Remember, they're still people. They're not props. Both people speak the following at the same time:

*I want to let go (3x).
Goodbye.*

Now, you may let go of one another and clean up the salt. The ritual is complete.

Color Me!

I Have the Key (Ghost Game)